

London Hughes presents London Hughes: Superstar

TV's award-winning stand up comedian and comedy writer, London Hughes, makes her Edinburgh Festival Fringe debut

London Hughes has always believed that she would be a mega-amous superstar, but at the age of 27 she hasn't quite achieved that, yet... She has, however, earned not one but three Guinness World Records, become the youngest person to win a prestigious Funny Woman Award, written and starred in countless TV and radio sitcoms and counts Prince Charles as a fan: he once told her she was 'far too pretty to be a comedian'.

This year the comedian makes her Edinburgh Fringe debut with London Hughes: Superstar (It's Just Nobody's Realised It), the hilarious tale of a young black girl's search for superstardom set to a backdrop of popular 90's TV shows. For a jam-packed hour, Hughes mixes her love of dance, television and comedy with funny and, at times, hilariously awkward audience participation as she shares her real life journey into the crazy world of entertainment as 'a black woman' – which she's been reminded that she is a few times. Hughes said 'I'd always look at Britney's career and compare it to mine. But It was so depressing! By the age of 12 Britney had starred in Disney's The Mickey Mouse club and by 14 she'd achieved pop stardom. By the age of 12 I'd made it into my school's book club, and by 14 I'd achieved a regular period.'

London Hughes: Superstar is a high-energy performance which entertains and at the same time examines the hot topic of diversity within the industry - all delivered in Hughes' signature honest and non-conformist comedic style. Will London get it all; the fame, the boys and, of course, the waxwork in Madame Tussauds?

'London Hughes is funny, vivacious and has Beyonce's moves on speed dial. Watch her go' Sir Lenny Henry
